HOW TO KEEP THIS GRIMOIRE

*This is a working book — print it, bind it, spill tea on it.
It is meant to grow moss and marginalia.*

- ◇ Print what you need, as often as you need. Every page is undated and reusable. Print a fresh plant profile for each new ally you meet; print twelve moon trackers for a year of moons.
- ◇ The Materia pages (plant profiles & field identification) are the heart of the book — one spread per plant, gathered over seasons into your own local materia.
- ◇ The Field pages (trip log, seasonal calendar, ethics) travel with you. A clipboard and a pencil in the woods beat a perfect binder at home.
- ◇ The Hearth pages (teas, salves, simmer pots) record what you make from what you gather — with dates, ratios and results, so your craft compounds.
- ◇ The Workings pages (spell log, correspondences, sigils, dreams) keep the subtle side of the practice. Note moon and season; patterns emerge in the margins.
- ◇ Bind it your way — three-ring binder, discbound, or a simple folder. The contents page at the front is a fill-in index: number your pages as your book grows.

A note on printing — pages are designed for US Letter or A4, single-sided, in ink-friendly near-black. Cardstock makes fine covers; 24 lb paper takes fountain pen well.

FORAGING TRIP LOG

Take as a guest, not as an owner.

- ◇ Be certain, then be certain again. Identify by at least three features and one trusted guide before anything touches a basket — and never trust an app alone with your life.
- ◇ Take a tithe, not a harvest. One in ten, never the first found, never the last standing. Leave the grandmother plants to seed the next hundred years.
- ◇ Know whose land you stand on — legally and historically. Ask permission where permission is needed; tread lightly where it is given.
- ◇ Leave protected species be. Learn your region's at-risk list and let rarity be a boundary, not a trophy.
- ◇ Harvest clean. Skip roadsides, sprayed verges, dog-walked strips and downstream of runoff. The plant remembers where it grew.
- ◇ Do no harm getting there. Stay on durable ground, close the gates, fill your holes, pack out more than you brought.
- ◇ Give something back. Water, a scattered seed, a cleared tangle of litter — the old bargain, kept small and often.

FROM THE ELDWYLD ARCHIVES

The Forager's Grimoire was made in the Eldwyld — a realm kept at the crossroads of imagination and implementation, where the mystical and the digital converge. It was designed to be printed, bound, carried into wet grass, and filled with a life's worth of green knowledge.

YOUR LICENSE

This grimoire is licensed for personal use: print as many copies as you wish, for yourself and for gifts, forever. Please don't resell, redistribute, or upload the files themselves — send fellow travelers to the Archives instead.

A NECESSARY WORD OF CARE

Nothing in these pages is medical advice, and no journal replaces a qualified guide, an up-to-date regional field manual, or common sense. Foraging carries real risk: misidentification can be fatal. You are the only one responsible for what you harvest and what you do with it.

PRINT NOTES

US Letter and A4 editions included · single-sided · near-black ink on any paper · pairs well with a three-ring binder, pressed leaves, and a pot of something warm.
